Sixth Sunday of Easter

Clericalism continues....

I appreciate Father Gerry making us aware of “clericalism” and the danger the Holy Father sees in it. But it sure took some searching to get my mind around what clericalism is.

The query blanked my go to for all questions Catholic, the Catechism of the Catholic Church (Doubleday 1995). The Catechism’s subject index records no entry for Clericalism where one should fall between Clairvoyance and Collectivism.

The National Catholic Reporter sites Pope Benedict XVI taking on clericalism in Latin America especially during a 2012 trip to Cuba. John L. Allen Jr. then framed clericalism as “perhaps the inevitable result of the faith being effectively a monopoly [in Latin America] until quite recently.

Typical expressions of this clericalism include:

- Clergy see themselves as political powerbrokers, playing a direct role in affairs of state.
- The church projects an image of power and privilege, with its preferred spiritual imagery emphasizing God as a cosmic monarch.
- The role of the laity is conceived in largely passive terms—‘pay, pray and obey.’
- Little premium is placed on evangelization or faith formation, with pastoral care understood largely in terms of administering the sacraments.”

Pope Francis decries this with even more vigor. In April 2016, according to Crux Now, the Holy Father “accused the Catholic hierarchy on his home continent of generating a ‘laical elite,’ formed by those who work in the ‘things of the Church,’ instead of helping ordinary baptized people live their faith in everyday situations. The clock had stopped, he said, on ‘The Hour of the Laity.’”

So, does clericalism operate in Mississippi, a state dominated by Evangelical Protestantism, a state where only 4.7% identify as Catholic, a state that in the 2004 National Surveys of Religion and Politics ranked as the least Catholic state in America? For more Catholic graphs and statistics, there is a great set retained by the Wall Street Journal, <http://graphics.wsj.com/catholics-us/>

As one who travels frequently for work, I enjoy the opportunity to worship in our universal church and celebrate Mass across the state and the nation. I will say, outside of St. Paul Parish, I have found myself subject to homilies containing overt political points of view and not so subtle directives. But these never lasted long, and could be prayed through.

Is this clericalism? It certainly thwarts our hope of being in this world but not of this world. “It’s never the shepherd who tells the laity what they have to do or say [in public life], they know it as well or even better than us,” Francis wrote in a letter to the head of the Vatican’s Congregation for Bishops and President of the Pontifical Commission for Latin America. “Our role, our joy, the joy of the shepherd is precisely in helping and stimulating, as many did before us, so that it’s the mothers, the grandmothers, the fathers who become the true protagonists of history.” This is also from Inés San Martín’s April 27, 2016 article in Crux Now. The Pope’s statement is clear and bold.

Still, having come this far in barely apprehending clericalism, and likely misapprehending it, I can only understand this well enough to instruct myself. I participate in Mass in a ministry, and even the laity can fall prey to the seduction of elitism, a glamour of pomp. The Catechism bears this clear instruction for Bishops and Priests under the heading The Sanctifying Office, but I think this may have value, too, for any servant of those shepherding a flock:

“They [the bishops and priests] sanctify her [the Church] by their example, ‘not as domineering over those in your charge but being examples to the flock.’ Thus, ‘together with the flock trusted to them, they may attain to eternal life.’”

Bring your own chairs, canopy, and cooler if you would like.

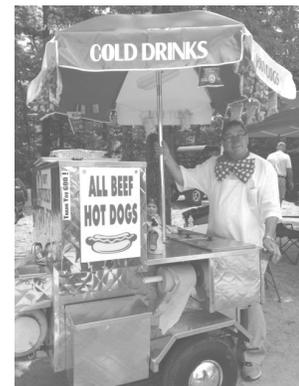

“What is the purpose of all of this celebration for Pentecost?” someone asked. The answer is: “The Purpose is that we are celebrating the official birth of the Church.”

The Church as we know it today was born on Pentecost when the Holy Spirit came upon that fledgling group in the Upper Room. The effect of the Holy Spirit was powerful and immediate. The disciples who had been terrified at the Passion and Death of Jesus were now out there proclaiming Him boldly.

It was a really big deal and while it would be great to remember it constantly, it just doesn't happen. Accordingly, we try to make it a very special event annually so as to renew the power that Jesus so desires for us to have all of the time.
